THEORY & PRACTICE IN RURAL EDUCATION: SPECIAL ISSUE ON RURAL STEM TEACHER DEVELOPMENT

11/4/22

Janet Stramel, professor of teacher education, recently published an article in Online Theory & Practice in Rural Education journal. Stramel served as managing editor of the research for this peer-reviewed journal that publishes articles focused on issues related to rural schools, students, educators, institutions of higher education, and communities. Articles from the field have related rural school success stories of how districts have overcome challenges to produce effective STEM teaching/learning in rural schools.

SIX INCOMING FALL 2023 FORT HAYS STATE FRESHMEN AWARDED FULL-RIDE RUDD SCHOLARSHIPS

3/9/23

Six freshmen students for the fall semester at Fort Hays State University have been selected to receive scholarships from the Rudd Foundation in Wichita. Following a competitive application process that focused on the students and their life stories, the sixth class of Rudd Scholars was chosen based also on the students' academic accomplishments, test scores, and extracurricular activities.

CHIPPIN' IN: AN ANALYSIS OF THE CRIMINOLOGICAL CONCEPTS WITHIN CYBERPUNK 2077

03/08/23

Dr. Morgan Steele, assistant professor of criminal justice, published an article March 8 in "Games and Culture." The article explores the story of the recent video game, Cyberpunk 2077 as an example of popular criminology. Specifically, it explores the game's story and environment by examining key characters' responses to structural inequalities through an anomie theory lens.

A HEARTFELT THANK YOU TO THE CHAMPIONS BACKING OUR STRATEGIC AFFILIATION INITIATIVE

3/10/23

The future of rural Kansas stands at a crossroads. Decades of declining and aging populations have stripped our communities of the critical human capital that fuels and sustains economic prosperity. A series of informal conversations between North Central Kansas Technical College President Eric Burks, Northwest Kansas Technical College President Ben Schears, and I rapidly became a shared vision for what we, working in close collaboration, could do to contribute to a brighter tomorrow for the communities we serve.
